Pass It On

A young lady from Milwaukee who was visiting a friend in Marshfield some time ago has since made a trip to California, and in some way this little story has got out: She was on an automobile drive and was very much shocked when somebody pointed out a figtree. "Why, I always thought fig leaves were much larger than that," she exclaimed.

Dick Strauss tells a story of a merchant acquaintance of his who died and his spirit appeared in front of the golden gate. "What do you want here?" asked St. Peter. "I'd like to come in," said the spirit. "Sorry, but we can't give you that privilege today," answered the saint. "Heaven is a little short of room today, but down below we have something else that I cheerfully recommend as just as good for you."

The wife of a well known man about town met another Marshfield woman at Rose Bros. corner yesterday afternoon and they began talking about the neighbors and each other's clothes. Finally the talk drifted to husbands. "Mine isn't home very often evenings, he always goes out for a little constitutional," said the woman whose husband is noted for his fondness for just a wee nip now and then. "Mine don't," said the other woman, "he keeps some in the house."

"BUSINESS IS GOOD."
Marshfield Merchant Pleased With Market Conditions as Noticed on Trip.
Leo Ross of Rose Bros., who returned Friday from a trip to the Chicago and eastern markets, believes that this is going to be a good year. "General business and industrial conditions," he says, "in the outside market seem to be in very healthy condition. Mills are all operating nearly to full capacity and are well employed in dry-goods and clothing field. Goods are advancing gradually in price with the tendency of still higher prices. If agricultural conditions open up seasonable and satisfactory we shall have all assurances of a prosperous season."
"Of course as to politics it is too early to forecast what effect the tariff revision will have on general business, for I do not think the Democratic congress would dare cut the tariff so deep as to endanger their future chances. We were fortunate to select the grandest assortment in ladies' and men's wearing apparel that it ever has been our pleasure to show to the people of Marshfield and vicinity."
